Kunsthof Public Access Terminal ::

Towards micro and minor forms of radio, picknick, Internet and an outdoor re-enactment of a ballet choreography for life

The extension of the radio horizon is a multi-path combat. The radio waves propagate beyond the optical horizon. The environment's behavior is not in itself a free space. But radio is freeing space by creating it. Could we share not only our activities and knowledge but access to space? Could wireless sharing make us all architects of a freed, heterogeneous Internet space? Transmission! Transversal vector signals vs. distance. Point-to-point! Becoming-together!

Ralf Homann

For decades, small, illegal FM stations have been accompanying resistant political practices without any kind of vanity and in a very charming way: from occupied grounds of nuclear power stations, border camps of "no human is illegal" campaigns, to camps on Wall Street. Under the radar of visual and thus representative charging: It is a remote flickering, a hissing and a silence maintained by pure energy. Maybe also the blue taste of roasted sesame seeds on salted celery. Could it be that a political act emerges from nothing, without an interest, from a wayside gathering? From a picnic arrangement somewhere in the open countryside? With roasted sesame seeds and a radio station?

SWAN SONG

Benjamin Egger

The Performance SWAN SONG refers to the dream of Everything's Possible. An amateur ballet dancer performs a variation of the choreography of the Dying Swan created by Michel Fokine in 1905 for the Prima Ballerina Anna Pavlova. A speech accompanies the dancer. The words of economic optimism and the power of self-motivation together with the fragile performance of the dancer build a space of uncertainty and hope, of up and down, of dream come true and dissatisfaction. As Swan Song is a metaphorical phrase for the beauty of the final gesture or effort given just before death the performance SWAN SONG opens a space declaring the dying of our current western and patriarchal culture on the one hand, and on the other approves of a state of individual emancipation and the joy of imperfection.

AKW & BS have been making Pandora's Box together since 2011.

The lesbian magazine Pandora's Box, which can be heard regularly on Radio Lora 97.5 MHz, this time is broadcasting directly to the public from Kunsthof from a room of paper, string, fabric, and tatters of plastic bags.

We are fans of simple radio: the voice is transmitted from room to room. It is an exciting thing. We are in the studio and report. Whatever comes up to us when we call woman! into the box.
